The Bogus Security

One of all the debating that has been going on since the war of "economic security" during recent years has been the fact that the economic welfare of the people of America depends on the welfare of goods and services produced in the nation. The welfare of the people depends on the welfare of the goods and services produced in the nation. The welfare of the people depends on the welfare of the goods and services produced in the nation.

As has been pointed out in this column, the business, as represented by the National Association of Manufacturers and the United States Chamber of Commerce and some segments of the national farm organizations, are spearheading the drive to eliminate wage and price controls. On the other side of the picture, there is the administration drive to tighten and strengthen the defense act.

When a number of years ago the government took over the production of goods and services, it was for the purpose of maintaining the production of goods and services. The government took over the production of goods and services, it was for the purpose of maintaining the production of goods and services. The government took over the production of goods and services, it was for the purpose of maintaining the production of goods and services.

Production of goods and services is a complex process. It involves the use of resources, labor, and capital. The government's role in production is to ensure that the production of goods and services is maintained. The government's role in production is to ensure that the production of goods and services is maintained. The government's role in production is to ensure that the production of goods and services is maintained.

Argue From Others' Point of View

HENRY STRAINERT, of Richmond, Indiana, once saved $13.50 by merely seeing the other fellow's point of view, and he says that that was better than earning the same amount for it gave him the satisfaction of knowing that he could handle a trying situation.

A friend who lived in the same house got two of Henry's shirts mixed with his own laundry. When the laundry was delivered this boy was out of town.

The delivery man demanded that Henry pay the entire bill of $15, or he couldn't have his two shirts. In vain Henry argued that he didn't want the other boy's laundry, that it could be held until the boy returned and paid his own bill. But Henry did want his own shirts. Naturally.

However, the man took the bundle of clothing back in its entirety to headquarters. Henry thought it over that night after he went to bed. All of a sudden there came into his mind something he had once heard a successful salesman say about "talking from the other fellow's point of view."

The next day he went around to see the head of the laundry and found he had been advised of the shirt status. He said the delivery man was right; the bill must be paid before Henry could get his shirts.

Said Henry, "I see your point of view and I am sure I would feel as you do about it if I were in your place. Of course, you don't know that my friend will ever return for his laundry."

"Exactly," the laundryman agreed. "And if he shouldn't you would be stuck with his clothing which you don't want."

"That's just the case," said the other man, "this isn't the first time such a thing has happened, you know."

"I'm sure of that," agreed Henry. "And as I say, I can't blame you however badly I need these shirts." He moved as if to go, saying, "I know my friend will return, I can only hope it will be this week."

At that the laundryman looked at him closely and said: "I'm sure you're telling the truth about your shirts and I'm going to take a chance on the other fellow coming back and paying his bill." Then he rang for one of the workers and told him to give Henry his shirts.

OVERSHADOWING everything else in the capital city, not only on the streets but in the halls of Congress, is the fact that the National Labor Relations Board is expected to issue a decision on the case of the United States Postal Service. ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual - National and International Problems Inevitable from Local Welfare.

A revealing article on the world's economic problems appeared in the June issue of Harper's Magazine. Written by C. Lester Walker, it deals with the amazing growth of the United States Postal Service.

The post office is big business, with a capital B. It also enjoys a total monopoly in its field, which is true of no other business, big or little. Its annual revenues run around $1,000,000,000. It has 200,000 employees, 42,000 branch offices, and 10,000 vehicles. Yet some of the country's most important business transactions are handled through the post office.

Mr. Walker writes, "Mail from London, England, was being received in Radio City as soon as soon as mail posted at the same date and hour in the Bronx."

This was the result of cuts in service which were ordered in April, 1950. And the reason for the cuts, according to the Postmaster General, was that the department would have a deficit of about $50,000,000 for the fiscal year, and something drastic had to be done.

Mr. Walker quotes a telling sentence from a Hoover Commission report which said the department has "a creaky, over-centralized, antiquated structure; outmoded methods and equipment; cumbersome budgeting and accounting systems; a mass of tangled regulations and restrictions." One of these faults, excessive centralization, may be the worst of all. The whole tendency of modern industry has been to decentralize, in the interest of economy, efficiency and better service to customers. Mr. Walker cites as one example of this a chain store system with 1,012 stores, each of which has been given almost complete managerial autonomy in the Post Office Department, by contrast, Washington runs everything by decision of consequence from headquarters and this often takes endless time-consuming correspondence to get.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION

Santa Paula, Calif. News

"The public may retail price wars, as the people in New York have shown, but unless we take our guess the territorial threat among dealers isn't likely to go on very long. The free enterprise system is based on profit and you can't make a profit on large scale selling at, or below the cost price. The price war, however, has proved that the dealer that died, but it isn't likely to live as high again for a long time to come."

Salamanca, N. Y. Inquirer

"It has been the experience of the taxpayer that the more money a governing body has to spend the more they will spend and come back and ask for more."

Tell City, Indiana, News

"The business of interfering with the cattle industry is pure monkey shine business."

Berco, Ohio, Enterprise

"The paper work required of small manufacturers and storekeepers is just about impossible. With that being given constant pay raises to defiance of controls, the little men are told they can roll their pants back and pay the increased cost out of profits. Small wonder that these small purveyors in great numbers flatly refused to comply with these onerous and voluminous directives. Yet all government must do to spawn more government is to say that refusal or inability to comply with bureau decrees is patriotic against the defense of the fort, and its position is unassailable."

Me Walker goes into details in his article, and some of his revelations are staggering. At the end, he summarizes a plan which, in his opinion, would eliminate all or practically all of the department's huge deficits. In essence, this plan would simply have the post office operate along standard business lines - something which, apparently government-businessmen never do. It remains to be seen if they ever will.

I will now discuss Einstein. My word, says Henry, you and Einstein. Hold your horses, I say, it is not RELATIVITY that I will tell you about, it is what Einstein said when he laid down his slide rule and talked Main Street talk. He said, "I live in that solitude that is painful to youth but is delicious in maturity."

I been pondering, and you know with more and more people being retired at 64 and then not knowing what to do with themselves, I figure they must have missed something along the road or they would have 100 things to catch up on. They would not need ask a psychologist what to do next.

But the moral, it is for the ones of 40 and 50 or thereabout—it is to prepare 'em for 64 and peace like Einstein's versus being perplexed and lost. Folks at 40 and 50 could stay home an evening now and then and do some preliminary pondering—also get acquainted with their off-shoots. And furthermore they are no longer the pictures on the dance floor that they were at 22. You know pop don't knock the ladies for a loop quite so easy after he reaches the 40-50 bracket—and that goes too for the pump and 40 mamas, if she only knew it. I kinda deduct it is time to rejuvenate our thinking. Time to relax at 40 or 50 and thereby avoid being a psychological problem or forlorn guy or dame at 64.

"Cocktail?"

(He: "She'll think I'm a sad sack if I say no!")
(She: "I don't want it, but what will he think?")

Do you have to drink, when you're out on a date or a party?

You might think so, to read some advertisements or listen to some radio shows.

Millions of dollars in liquor propaganda are saturating the public with the idea that drinking is socially indispensable.

Smartly dressed men and women, in lavish surroundings, eagerly consume the advertiser's product. Handsome athletes, beautiful girls, even grandmothers try hard to push the public into believing that everyone drinks. Text and commercials imply that alcohol is safe as milk.

IN KEEPING with the nation-wide drive to encourage "car care," we have installed new equipment which we feel will enable us to do a better job for you. The lift jack on our lube rack is so designed that we can give your car the same up and down motion as when it is moving on the road, thus allowing the grease to be thoroughly distributed throughout the vital places.

WE ALSO HAVE an "Iron Tireman" that removes car tires from the wheels more rapidly and with less wear and tear on your tires than the old fashioned method. Come in and see it work.

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

The Word of the Individual
Lesson for July 1: Matthew 8: 1-4;
18: 1-6, 12-14
Memory Selection: Psalm 8: 5.

DURING the quarter we have Christian teaching on human relations, and we begin today with a lesson on the worth of the individual.

We read of Jesus cleansing a poor leper. In the ancient time there was no cure for leprosy, and the man afflicted with it had no hope of being saved from it except by the healing of God. The man of whom we read had a great faith, saying unto the Lord: "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." And Jesus said unto him: "I will; be thou made clean."

When the disciples came to Jesus and asked him who was the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, he called a little child, set him in their midst, and bade them be humble as the child, and declared that whosoever should cause such a little one to stumble would be better off to have a millstone hanged about his neck and be drowned in the depth of the sea. Thus did Jesus emphasize the value of childhood.

The last passage indicates by the story of the lost sheep the Lord's solicitude for the lost of men. It is not the will of the Father that any man should perish. Thus Jesus sets an infinite value upon every human being. And so should we, and make sure of our own salvation and, setting an infinite value upon others, try to bring them to salvation.

Putting up grass silage enables Maine dairymen to harvest and store grass and legume crops when they contain the greatest food value. Many dairymen in the Pine Tree State are now using inexpensive trench silos for storing grass silage.

SUCCESSFUL PARENTHOOD

Associate Editor
Parents Magazine

INEVITABLY, there comes that recent hour this afternoon as day of shocked realization that you don't keep us all waiting for the little boy or girl one has been "dinner as usual."

Thinking of as "scarcely more than a baby" has been transformed into an adolescent. The tomboy who used to be a need in your child, clothes develops an intense interest in the length of her hemline and the shape of her haircut. The girl who had to be browbeaten into washing her neck and shoulders of his own volition, along his chest, sticks his tongue and spends his allowance on taking a girl to the movies.

Just as surely as a sudden shooting up in physical size, there are signposts along the road of growing up, and simultaneously one finds the home inhabited by a new and baffling personality with whom one must get completely reacquainted.

Volunteers have been written about adolescence. Hundreds of theories have been expounded on the handling of the difficult in-between years. It is neither our province nor intention to solve the problems here in a paragraph. However, we offer a few good-natured pointers from a mother who seems to have steered four youngsters through teenage bewilderments with fair success. She claims these do's and don'ts for parents—though superficial—are essential for keeping peace.

Avoid direct orders, consult your teenagers as to likes and dislikes, consider his or her convenience as to the disposal of time. "We're planning early dinner tonight. Would you please try to get home by five-thirty?" is apt to get more cooperation than, "Get in at

SUPERIOR COURT

Pleading guilty to grand larceny of cattle, Philip Wilkins of Somersworth, N. H., Ralph Eldon and Wendall King of Madbury, N. H., were sentenced to serve two to four years, and Richard Wilkins and Donald Devins of Madbury received sentences of one and a half to three years.

On charges of forging and uttering, Llewellyn Keller of Rumford received a one to two years sentence, and Albert Walker of Norway one of three to six years.

Justice Donald C. Webber ordered a mistrial of Richard Powell, Jr., of West Peru, charged with reckless driving, after the jury disagreed.

In a statement to the court regarding the charge of manslaughter against Albert Kimball of Bethel, who was reported to be the driver of a truck which caused the death of a Bethel girl last October, Justice Webber said last Thursday:

"This case has been a matter of public interest and concern in Oxford County. I have known about the case for some time. I know a great deal about its background and the public attention it has aroused. I have had occasion to discuss the case at great length with Justice Granville C. Gray, presiding justice at trial held at the March term of Superior court, and since my arrival here and during this term of court I have sought information. I have discussed it with many people, and have reviewed the case with the County Attorney. I asked him to consider the extent of the evidence he could expect to induce at another trial.

"To be considered manslaughter, the degree of negligence far exceeds that required to prove civil negligence. There is absolutely no indication of this in suggestions made to me. There is no indication, in my mind, that there is any possibility to demonstrate beyond the reason of a doubt, that the respondent of anything like criminal negligence. I will not comment on what the situation might be if a civil suit is brought against him.

"There has been one trial which has cost the taxpayers a lot of money, unfortunately resulted indirectly in the death of one good citizen of Oxford County, (a witness dropped dead during court proceedings) and impaired the health of two others to the extent of causing great concern.

"No one in the county would want to pursue this groundless prosecution to the extent that it becomes persecution. One trial was enough to demonstrate that there was no hope for State of Maine to prove criminal negligence in this case.

"I do not know any of the persons connected with this case. My only concern is as a justice.

"I think the only fair result, the case be not pressed for insufficient evidence. In all likelihood, another trial would profit nothing. I anticipate the same result.

"As to the other cases pending against the respondent, I have no information and no suggestions. If the County Attorney wishes continuance of these other cases, continuance is granted."
